OUR STORY

Hooligans Goat Farm was founded by Michael & Natalie Cochenour in 2012.

What started as a hobby farm has turned into a thriving local business serving the South Lyon, Michigan community. Focused on animal welfare and customer satisfaction, Hooligans offers high-producing dairy goats with dispositions perfect for life on the farm. If you're looking to add to your herd or start your own hobby farm, Hooligans will provide you with the right goats for your needs.

MICHAEL COCHENOUR

Michigan born and Michigan raised, Michael spent his early years near Bellville and Ypsilanti. He married Natalie in 2012 and moved to a 5-acre farm in South Lyon, Michigan. Michael has a background in healthcare and became interested in goat farming because of on-set adult allergies to everything cow. Goat milk is beneficial if you have a mild dairy intolerance because it contains a smaller concentration of protein and is overall easier to digest. However, it is not a recommended replacement for anyone with a cow dairy allergy.

What started as a hobby quickly turned into Hooligans Goat Farm. He works the farm with his wife and two daughters, providing both goats and goat dairy to the South Lyon community.

NATALIE COCHENOUR

Natalie was also born and raised in Michigan, growing up in a small town north of Ann Arbor. Like her husband, she also has a background in healthcare. After marrying Michael in 2012 it was time to pick a place to plant family roots. The couple was drawn to a small, 5-acre farm in South Lyon, Michigan. The farm was primarily set up for horses, which was ideal, since Natalie has had a companion horse named Michelob since she was 15. That's how Hooligans and life on the farm began.

Life on the farm became even better in 2012 with the birth of daughter Sophia Grace; and became even better again in 2014 with the birth of daughter Mackenzie Rose.

THE COCHENOUR DAUGHTERS

Sophia and Mackenzie are very much a part of Hooligans, and Hooligans is a part of them. They can often be found helping mom and dad on the farm, pitching in with everything from cleaning the barn to brushing and feeding the animals. While safety always comes first, Hooligans is also their 5-acre playground. Thanks to these two spark plugs, laughter and happiness are in full supply on the farm.

HOOLIGANS GOATS & ANIMALS

A healthy herd makes for great milk and happy goats. Hooligans Goat Farm follows the Animal Welfare Approval Act and will achieve certification when the creamery facility is up and running.

The Cochenour family plays, loves and handles each and every one of their animals each and every day.
